Spring Break Travels

Traveling can be fun with the entire family! Keep your furry family members safe during your travels from parasites by keeping up with Interceptor Plus. Interceptor keeps your dogs protected from different kinds of worms, such as tapeworms, hookworms, whipworms, and heartworm. Each dose lasts one month long and comes in the form of a delectable treat that your dog is sure to enjoy! For our feline friends, Profender is a great option to keep them safe from worms too!

Schedule an appointment to talk with your doctor about the areas your pet is traveling to, as heartworm disease is prevalent throughout the US with varying hotspots.

Fleas and ticks are a large problem with the warmer months around the corner. Keep both your cats and dogs safe through Bravecto! Just like Interceptor, Bravecto comes as a treat but lasts 3 months long for your canine companions that are 6 months of age or older! For cats, a simple squeeze of our liquid version between the shoulder blades gives them 3 months protection as well!

APRIL FEAR FREE TIP

Leaving the comforts of their home can be stressful to some pets.

Stress can be shown in many different forms, such as overly panting, trembling/shaking, and defecating/urinating in the car.

This leads to unnecessary trauma for both you and your pet that can be remedied with some help!

Talk to your doctor about minor sedatives and/or calming medications to see which works best for your pet!

Heartworm Disease

Heartworm disease is transmitted through mosquitoes to your pet and can take up to 6-8 months before the worms become adults. This can affect your pets' lungs, heart, and other internal organs. This disease has been reported in all 50 states but is most prevalent along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Your pet can be tested for heartworms through a blood test and can be prevented through specific internal parasite medications, such as Interceptor Plus for dogs and Heartgard for cats!
